

SEA BIRDS AND ANIMALS.

Fisher Nature Study No. 13.

APR -2 1918

THE Coast of Oregon is the home of a large variety of water animals. The turtle and tufted puffin make their home in the marsh. This latter, often called the sea parrot, looks more like a battleship than a bird. The sea lion lives partly in the water and partly on land. They live in large colonies. Each colony has a leader, whose every move is religiously followed by the rest. Here is also the home of the white pelicans, who nest together on an island in the lake. The pelicans are of unsqual size, the size depending on the amount of food they eat. Those who are quickest get first run on the food.
